Business Ethics and Social Responsibility - Business Ethics and Methodologies - 2012-10-01

- Joseph R. DesJadri...
This book is the first empirical scholarly study of the business history of Turkey from the seventeenth century until the present. It aims to show the distinctive characteristics of capitalism in Turkey within a global and comparative perspective, dealing with three main periods: 1. The institutional context that shaped the capital development in Turkey, because it becomes a focal point for the debate between social scientists who have not reached an agreement on the reasons for the differences in capitalism across countries. The institutional context is now seen as a key factor in the development of capitalism. 2. The role of state in the development of capitalism. The Turkish state has always been a key player in the development of capitalism. 3. The role of social forces, particularly the role of the bourgeoisie. This book shows that the role of the bourgeoisie has been crucial in the development of capitalism. It also shows that the role of the state and the role of the bourgeoisie have been complementary in the development of capitalism.
